

Testing the Waters (Free with Prime Book 1)

Elizabeth will keep you wondering what's going to happen next? With every line and every chapter. This is a fantastic story! To this day, my own family still does not know the full truth. They are completely unaware of what was going on in my fourteen-year-old mind. This baby simulator put ideas into my head that caring for a baby would be as simple as turning a key... I eventually was looking forward to carrying the baby around with me and pretending that I was a mommy. I was now excited for this assignment. I wanted to practice, and I wanted my doll to be real. This idea of mine quickly became an obsession that would change the direction of the course of my entire life. I started spending my days daydreaming and coming up with ideas to expedite my goal of becoming pregnant. I first searched online. At the age of fifteen, I learned about fertility and the science behind it. I researched different tips and methods for TTC, or trying to conceive. I was very secretive and subtle about this mission of mine. I printed out a chart to track my periods, so I would know when I was ovulating. I hid this chart under my bed. I started taking my basal body temperature and drinking an ingredient in cough syrup that was rumored to help. I had a backup plan if I were to be confronted with questions about this. The thermometer and cough syrup were under my bed, because I felt like I was getting sick. No person can argue with that, I would think to myself. I found a movie to watch on one of those Womens Network channels. It was about a fifteen-year-old girl who accidentally became pregnant. I watched this movie with wide eyes, and nothing in the world could have disrupted my attention. Seems not all that bad. It happens all the time! There is a freaking movie about it, it's not like I am still only thirteen or something. I had concluded that fifteen was the earliest acceptable age to have a baby. This movie did not scare me or intimidate me, it gave my peanut sized brain even more ideas and desires to become pregnant. It was a glamorous thing from what I could tell. I became so obsessed with getting pregnant that I also found reality shows on television. They documented couples who were having a baby for the first time. My small fourteen inch television set had a timer, and it was scheduled to power on every morning at nine. I had to have all of the information I could possibly get. I researched this subject with true diligence. These couples, on the reality show, were much older than I, but that was never considered a factor in my mind. I was already mature and grown up enough to make my own decisions. Or so I thought.
